PASTORAL NOTES

Did Jesus go to school? Now that a new school-term has started, we may be reminded how important it is to learn to read and write, and how we take it for granted that 2000 years ago (New Testament) so much writing took place, giving us the inspired word of God in the holy scriptures. Jesus, we are taught in our faith, "was born like us in all things but sin", and so had to learn to read and write: we hear of Him reading in the synagogue in Nazareth, causing astonishment and disturbance by His wisdom. The only writing we hear of is when he doodled on the ground, with the crowd wanting to stone a woman in their midst. It seems fitting that there is no written word in person, but He speaks to us in the words of the Gospel especially. Many of the apostles may have been fishermen, but not necessarily thereby unable to read or write. Still, Paul, who was highly educated, indicates at the end of some of his letters, that he had been dictating to a scribe or scertary, only personally signing the letter at the end. The Church is wise in giving us just short passages of Scripture at Mass – one saint tells us that we are always learning something new from the word of God and, if something touches us specially, we are to treasure that piece, and not worry if there are parts we cannot follow. The 'MY DAY-BY-DAY' booklet is quite helpful in that way,
