PASTORAL NOTES

CCTV in church may seem strange, even offensive, though it is established even in our Northampton Cathedral. The subject has been discussed at some length in the last two Parish Forum meetings. To some it seems wrong to have cameras in church, where people come to pray in privacy. Others find themselves put off coming in, knowing that thefts or the threat of theft have occurred in the past. Someone has to make a decision and on this occasion it falls to me. We are blessed with a church open every day, where I know people come daily to pray. It grieves me to think anyone should be nervous of doing so. I believe CCTV will be a reassurance, placed discretely by the Church entrances, and that in time we will hardly notice it, while those intent on misbehaviour, however infrequent, will be quietly deterred, as in many public places. Anyone is always welcome to share their concerns and new ideas are always welcome. Meanwhile, thank you for your patience.
